EVERYDAY READERS	Where's Spot?	Eric Hill	Works on the principle of involving the child in the act of reading by using flaps so that the process becomes interactive. Key vocabulary introduction.	Key positional vocabulary - in, under, behind, inside	Use the game of 'hide and seek' when playing. Can be used to create new versions by hiding a different animal under homemade flaps
	Dear Zoo	Rod Campbell	This book is a gateway into learning about different animals. The repetition of 'so' will add a new conjunction to a child's repertoire. D	What could it be? What can you see? Will he keep it? Would you like this one? Discuss the reasons for sending the animals back – heavy, fragile, tall, dangerous, fierce, grumpy, 'with care', scary, naughty, jumpy and perfect.	Use masks or toys or puppets and involve the children in the story, playing different parts.
	You Choose	Nick Sharrat & Pippa Goodheart	This classic book is good to share many times, especially working closely with a few children so they can look at the pictures and choose.	Invite children to make collections – organising toys or objects into different categories. Play sorting games – by size, colour, shape or type. Use the book many times to choose a main character, a setting, an animal or object	Use these selections then to make up simple stories. The book can be used endlessly for this as the combinations are almost infinite!
	We're Going On A Bear Hunt	Michael Rosen	Read and Respond. Learn the story orally, map it and act it out outside.	Ask: Why does the writer say 'we're not scared' at the very start of the story? Who is scared? Talk about how everyone feels at different points. Ask: Was the bear angry or did he just want a friend? Look at the different places and invent other onomatopoeic phrases (swishy swashy).	Draw a new map, perhaps of the local area, and create a new version. Act or sing the new version, with costumes or puppets and film it for parents.

	Brown Bear, Brown Bear What do You See?	Bill Martin JR & Eric Carle	Read, enjoy and let children join in until they know the story. Leave copies around so they can 'play at reading'.	Discuss what else the animals might hear, touch, taste or see. Ask: How do the different colours make you feel? Which is your favourite?	Create a different version of the story for other animals that the children know, such as a cat or dog. Create tissue collages using primary colours or bold paintings of animals. Also, read Polar Bear, Polar Bear, What Do You Hear? by the same authors
	Jaspers Beanstalk	Nick Butterworth & Mick Inkpen	This story makes a neat precursor to The Very Hungry Caterpillar as it shows how to make up a simple story by repeating the days of the week and describing what happens on each day.	This story makes a neat precursor to The Very Hungry Caterpillar as it shows how to make up a simple story by repeating the days of the week and describing what happens on each day.	Discuss what happens at the end of this story – and then decide with the children what happens to Jasper at the top of the beanstalk!
	The Very Hungry Caterpillar	Eric Carle	Share until the children know the story well.	Ask: Who is 'Christa'? Discuss the idea of the author/artist making the book for someone else. Create collages of the moon at night, leaves and trees. Notice the alliteration (light/ little/ lay/ leaf) and the introduction of another conjunction 'but'. Ideal for getting a sense of days of the week, different fruit (bring in a selection) and growing!	Some of this work might best be done in the spring/summer when you can hatch out butterflies or at least see some outside! Paint huge, vibrant butterflies.
	Hairy Maclary From Donaldson Dairy	Lynley Dodd	Read this story many times with everyone joining in and savouring the rhymes	Ask: Which is the favourite dog? Who is the least favourite? Try inventing other similes instead of 'as big as a horse', for example, 'as	Play games to hear which words rhyme and which do not. Talk about names that we give pets.

				big as a car'! Collect and list rhyming words.
	Each Peach Pear Plum	Janet & Allan Ahlberg	Read &amp; Respond. Read together and look carefully at each picture	Tell the class the stories or rhymes behind each of the characters. Make sure that the story books are available for the children to look at. Chant the book together and try inventing a rhythmic clap as a chorus between each page.	Provide puppets or costumes and objects from the stories for play
	Hug	Jez Alborough	In this book there are of course lots of the different animals to name, but it is also important to let the children tell you how the monkey and the other animals feel and what they might be thinking.	Get some sticky notes in the shape of speech bubbles and add in what characters might say or think. Avoid the temptation to tell the children!	Make masks and play at the story – use toys or puppets to re-enact. Try making up the whole story with the class, write this up and turn it into a Big Book. The theme of losing a mother also features in Come on, Daisy! and in the Reception book Owl Babies.
	The Train Ride	June Crebbin	There is plenty to discuss in the story – animals, meadows, hills, farms, tractors, tickets, tunnels, the seaside, lighthouse and sand.	Ask: Who has been on a car or bus journey? Where did you go and what did you see? Who is the lady with the child? What is the town and what is the countryside? Ask: Why are they travelling to Gran's?	Bring in a mirror so that everyone can see themselves. Make seaside small worlds using sand and water. Change the story and have a child coming from the country into the city and ask: What would they see? Lay out a train track.

	Come On Daisy	Jane Simmons	Some children might have noticed by now the question marks in certain book titles and here we are now with an exclamation mark as well!	Start with the cover. Ask: Who is speaking, to whom and what might it mean? What do you think will happen in the story? Why must Daisy stay close? Talk about: 'I'll try'. Track Daisy's feelings. Emphasise the 'but' construction when reading with children joining in. Ask: Are the dangers real? What is the book about? What is it telling us to do when we go out with Mum or Dad?	Make a poster of ideas of how to stay safe when you are out and about
